

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xii
I 'Rude and disgraceful beginnings': a view of the history of chemistry from the nineteenth century British Journal for the History of Science 21, 1988, 273–294 (Presidential address to British Society for the History of Science, 1988)	1
II The electrochemical theory of Sir Humphry Davy – I: The Voltaic pile and electrolysis Annals of Science 15, 1959, 1–13	23
III Ibid. , II: Electrical interpretations of chemistry Annals of Science 15, 1959, 15–25	37
IV Ibid. , III: The evidence of the Royal Institution manuscripts Annals of Science 19, 1963, 255–271	49
V The electrochemical theory of Berzelius - I: Origins of the theory Annals of Science 19, 1963, 117–126	67
VI Ibid. , II: An electrochemical view of matter Annals of Science 19, 1963, 127–145	77
VII Berzelius and the development of the atomic theory John Dalton and the Progress of Science , ed. D.S.L. Cardwell. Manchester: Manchester University Press, 1968, 259–273 (Paper read at the Dalton Bicentenary Celebrations, Manchester, September 1966 )	97
VIII Introduction to Essai sur la Théorie des Proportions Chimiques, et sur l'Influence Chimique de l'Électricité J. J. Berzelius (1819), Reprint. New York: Johnson Reprint Corporation, 1972 [excluding commentary and notes], v–xxviii	113

IX	Chemistry on the edge of Europe: growth and decline in Sweden	137
	The Making of the Chemist: The Social History of Chemistry in Europe 1789–1914 , eds D. Knight and H. Kragh. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998, 219–231
X	The archives of Sir Edward Frankland: resources, problems and methods (with Shirley P. Russell)	151
	British Journal for the History of Science 23, 1990 [excluding section on 'Exploitation and Access'], 175–181
XI	Chemical techniques in a pre-electronic age: the remarkable apparatus of Edward Frankland	159
	Instruments and Experimentation in the History of Chemistry , eds F.L. Holmes and T.H. Levere. Cambridge, MA: The MIT Press, 2000, 311–334
XII	Kekulé and Frankland: A psychological puzzle?	183
	The Kekulé Riddle: A Challenge for Chemists and Psychologists , ed. J.H. Wotiz. Vienna, IL: Cache River Press, 1993, 77–101
XIII	Early concepts of aromatic substitution	209
	The Kekulé Riddle: A Challenge for Chemists and Psychologists , ed. J.H. Wotiz. Vienna, IL: Cache River Press, 1993, 153–174
XIV	August Wilhelm Hofmann, cosmopolitan chemist	233
	Die Allianz von Wissenschaft und Industrie: A.W. Hofmann (1818–1892) , eds C. Meinel and H. Scholz. Weinheim: VCH, 1992, 65–75
XV	The changing role of synthesis in organic chemistry	245
	Ambix 34, 1987, 169–180
XVI	The origins of conformational analysis	257
	van't Hoff-Le Bel Centennial, ACS Symposium Series No. 12 , ed. O.B. Ramsay. Washington D.C: ACS, 1975, 159–178 (paper read to the American Chemical Society, Atlantic City, NJ, September 1974)
XVII	Advances in organic chemistry over the last 100 years	277
	Annual Reports on the Progress of Chemistry 100 (Section B), 2005, 3–31

CONTENTS

vii

XVIII Chemical bonds 1841–1991: 150 years of the British chemical community Chemical Society Reviews 20, 1991, 425–440	307
Index	323