

Contents

General Editors' Preface	vii
List of Figures	viii
Notes on the Contributors	x
Acknowledgments	xiv
Introduction
Margaret Markwick and Deborah Denenholz Morse	1
PART 1: Sex, Power And Subversion
1 (A)genda Trouble and the Lot Complex: Older Men-Younger Women Relationships in Trollope
Robert M. Polhemus	11
2 He Knew He Was Right : The Sensational Tyranny of the Sexual Contract and the Problem of Liberal Progress
Kathy Alexis Psomiades	31
3 Bastards to the Time: Legitimacy as Legal Fiction in Trollope's Novels of the 1870s
Jenny Bourne Taylor	45
4 Out of the Closet: Homoerotics in Trollope's Novels
Margaret Markwick	61
PART 2: Imperial Gender
5 "Some Girls Who Come From the Tropics": Gender, Race, and Imperialism in Anthony Trollope's He Knew He Was Right
Deborah Denenholz Morse	77
6 Anthony Trollope's The Eustace Diamonds and "The Great Parliamentary Bore"
Lauren M. E. Goodlad	99
7 "Two Identities": Gender, Ethnicity, and Phineas Finn
Mary Jean Corbett	117

