SERIES IRELAND AND ANGLO-IRISH RELATIONS SINCE 1800: CRITICAL ESSAYS

Edited by N.C. Fleming, Cardiff University, UK and Alan O'Day, Greyfriars, University of Oxford, UK

This landmark series of three volumes brings together selected essays from leading and specialist journals that have made a significant or original contribution to Irish historiography. Each volume contains a range of articles reappraising the major political themes of the period, but also offering new interpretations on social, economic, cultural and religious history, as well as women's history and historical geography. Introductions to each volume explain the specific and wider significance of the articles.

Shakespeare and Twentieth-Century Irish Drama

Conceptualizing Identity and Staging Boundaries

Rebecca Steinberger, College Misericordia

Exploring the influence of Shakespeare on drama in Ireland, Rebecca Steinberger examines works by two representative playwrights: Sean O'Casey (1880–1964) and Brian Friel (b. 1929). Shakespeare's plays, grounded in history, nationalism, and imperialism, embody an empathy for the Irish other. Irish dramatists' appropriations of Shakespeare, Steinberger argues, were both a reaction to the language of domination and a means to support their revision of the Irish as Subject.

Irishness and Womanhood
in Nineteenth-Century British Writing

Thomas Tracy, Grambling State University

Using Lady Morgan's The Wild Irish Girl as his point of departure, Thomas J. Tracy argues that nineteenth-century debates over what constitutes British national identity often revolved around representations of Irishness, especially Irish womanhood. He maps the genealogy of this development in fiction, political discourse, and the popular press, from Edgeworth's Castle Rackrent through Trollope's Irish novels, focusing on the pivotal period from 1806 through the 1870s.

Seeing Suffering in Women's Literature of the Romantic Era

Elizabeth A. Dolan, Lehigh University

"Elizabeth Dolan significantly modifies and deepens our understanding of the Romantic period, as she connects apparently disparate critical trajectories: medical understandings of the physiology of the eye, aesthetic and scientific modalities of seeing, and the discourse of suffering underlying social movements."

—Gina Luria Walker, New School University

As she explores tropes of illness, healing and social justice in the writings of Mary Wollstonecraft, Charlotte Smith and Mary Shelley, Dolan engages with a wide range of primary sources in science and medicine.

Britain, the Empire, and the World at the Great Exhibition of 1851

Edited by Jeffrey A. Auerbach, California State University, Northridge and Peter H. Hoffenberg, University of Hawai'i, Manoa

This collection of essays discusses the significance of colonial and foreign participation at the Great Exhibition in 1851, including the exhibits, publications, officials and visitors, before, during and after the event in London's Crystal Palace. These essays consider the ways that the Exhibition connected London, England and many parts of the world, suggesting strong imperial, international and global connections and meanings. In doing so, the contributors consider the importance of the event for England and the participating colonies and nations, as well as the ways by which that participation affected their relationship to Britain and how the British saw their place in the world.

Restoration Ireland

Always Settling and Never Settled

Edited by Coleman Dennehy, University College Dublin, Republic of Ireland

In recent decades, the historiography of early modern Ireland, particularly of the seventeenth century, has been revitalized. However, much of this new work has focused either on the critical decades of the 1640s or the Williamite wars, while the Restoration period still remains largely neglected. This volume provides an opportunity to explore the period between 1660 and 1688, and reassess some of the crucial events it witnessed. It provides a set of interrelated essays that not only addresses a gap in the history of the Restoration period, but also serves to take stock of the limited work that has been done on the period.

Contents: Preface; Restoration Ireland—themes and problems, Tim Harris; The Irish Restoration land settlement and its historians, Michael Perceval-Maxwell; The Restoration land settlement in Ireland: a statistical interpretation, Kevin McKenny; The Restoration Irish parliament, 1661–6, Coleman A. Dennehy; A play supposedly fitter for the fire than for the stage: the fiction of Roger Boyle, 1st Earl of Orrery and the re-casting of history, John Cronin; Changing their path: Quaker adaptation to the challenge of Restoration, 1660–80, Sandra Maria Hynes; Catholic clerical responses to the Restoration: the case of Nicholas French, Jason McHugh; 'A proportionable mixture': William Petty, political arithmetic, and the transmutation of the Irish, Ted McCormick; 'Grace and favour': the Cabal ministry and Irish Catholic politics, 1667–73, Anne Creighton; 'Dividing the bear's skin before she is taken': Irish Catholics and land in the late Stuart monarchy, 1683–91, Eoin Kinsella; Conclusion: Restoration Ireland, Toby Barnard; Index.

Educating the Child in Enlightenment Britain

Beliefs, Cultures, Practices

Edited by Mary Hilton, Cambridge University, UK and Jill Shefrin, University of Toronto

Ashgate Studies in Childhood, 1700 to the Present

Posing a challenge to more traditional approaches to the history of education, this interdisciplinary collection examines the complex web of beliefs and methods by which culture was transmitted to young people in eighteenth-century Britain. Contributors cast a wide net to uncover the rich variety of educational activities, the multitude of cultural and social contexts in which young people were educated, and the extent of the differences between principle and practice throughout the period.

Warfare in Europe 1919–1938

Edited by Geoffrey Jensen, Virginia Military Institute

The International Library of Essays on Military History

Although ostensibly a time of peace, one of the richest and most fascinating periods in military history falls between the two world wars. With good reason, even today military theorists look to these years for relevant lessons. The articles and papers collected together in this volume highlight the major themes and developments of interwar military affairs in Europe, including the new doctrines of tank warfare, air power, German “Blitzkrieg,” and Soviet operational art. They also demonstrate the important place of the major armed conflicts of the period, such as the Russian and Spanish Civil Wars, in European history.

Roma Felix—Formation and Reflections of Medieval Rome

Edited by Éamonn Ó Carragáin, University College Cork, Ireland and Carol Neuman de Vegvar, Ohio Wesleyan University

Church, Faith and Culture in the Medieval West

After the Roman empire fell, medieval Europe continued to be fascinated by Rome itself, “the Chief of Cities,” once the center of the empire, including its history, its buildings, and above all its early Christian martyrs, and the papacy, central to the western Latin church. This book explores ways in which the city itself was preserved, envisioned, and transformed not only by its residents, but also by the many pilgrims who flocked to Rome, and by northern European cultures (in particular, the Irish and English) who imagined and imitated the city as they understood it.

Peace and Reconciliation

In Search of Shared Identity

Edited by Sebastian C.H. Kim, Pauline Kollontai and Greg Hoyland, all at York St John University, UK

“A most welcome addition to the field...an exceptional resource for discussions of peace and reconciliation...” —David Tombs, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland

The volume explores theoretical issues such as political and economic implications of reconciliation; interfaith and biblical perspectives; and the role of religion in peace-making. Furthermore, the contributors examine practical implications of the theme in the contexts of Germany, Northern Ireland, South Africa, India, East Asia, Bosnia-Herzegovina and the Korean peninsula.

Gendering Migration

Masculinity, Femininity and Ethnicity in Post-War Britain

Edited by Louise Ryan, Middlesex University, UK and Wendy Webster, University of Central Lancashire, UK

Studies in Migration and Diaspora

“Based on a series of fascinating case studies, this book makes a major contribution to the mainstreaming of gender...Focusing on both well-known and lesser-known migrant groups who have arrived in Britain since the war, the volume enriches our understanding of the gendered texture of Britain’s so-called multicultural society.” —Russell King, University of Sussex, UK

Gendering Migration demonstrates the significance of studying migration through the lens of gender and ethnicity and the contribution this perspective makes to migration histories. Considering the impact of migration on masculine and feminine identities, it extends our understanding of questions of gender and migration, focusing on the history of migration to Britain after the Second World War.

The Politics of Unemployment in Europe

Policy Responses and Collective Action

Edited by Marco Giugni, University of Geneva, Switzerland

This book offers a state-of-the-art discussion of the political issues surrounding unemployment in Europe. It is unique in offering both a policy and institutional perspective and in studying the perspective of individual members of civil society who engage in collective action related to the issue of unemployment. The book contains a number of genuinely cross-national chapters as well as chapters dealing with specific national cases, namely the UK, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium and Sweden.

Queer Attachments

The Cultural Politics of Shame

Sally R. Munt, University of Sussex, UK

Queer Interventions

"...the book is a valuable contribution to the field. A must read for scholars of British cultural studies...Highly recommended." —Choice

In Queer Attachments, Sally R. Munt explores the vicissitudes of shame across a range of texts, cultural milieux, historical locations and geographical spaces. This passionately argued book is an interdisciplinary synthesis of cultural politics, emotions theory and narrative that challenges us to think about the queerly creative proclivities of shame.

Selected Contents: Queer Irish sodomites: the shameful histories of Edmund Burke, William Smith, Theodosius Reed, the Earl of Castlehaven and diverse servants—among others; Shove the queer: Irish/American shame in New York's annual St Patrick's Day parades.

Executive Measures, Terrorism and National Security Have the Rules of the Game Changed?

David Bonner, University of Leicester, UK

"Professor Bonner's timely and thought-provoking study of British legal approaches to terrorism and insurgency draws on a wealth of comparative and historical material. The result is a cogent challenge to official discourse that claims that the 'rules of the game' have radically changed post 9/11. No democratic society can afford to ignore the lessons he so eloquently points to." —Colm Campbell, University of Ulster, UK

Stephen Vertigans, Robert Gordon University, UK

"...a remarkable book about terrorism. From gun and talk shows to music, he extends the poignant case studies of Hamm and Stern in a sober, yet provocative manner... This book is especially useful for understanding conflict defined as terrorism from local to global settings." —Pat Lauderdale, Arizona State University

Considering a range of influential terror groups from the last 40 years, this book explores relationships between people, social processes and activities that result in acts of terrorism. It examines Islamic groups alongside nationalist, "red" and far right organizations to identify important similarities in the social contexts and experiences and demands of members.

Ethics and Global Politics

"...it makes an important contribution to our understanding of how terrorists become politicians and how armed groups become political parties."

—Francesco Cavatorta, Dublin City University, Ireland

How do terrorists become politicians? This book embraces a series of comparative case studies in order to examine important issues regarding the relationship between terrorism and political processes. It identifies the characteristics necessary for the transition from a "terrorist" organization to a political party and situates this within broader debates about substantive ethical concerns motivating the distinction between legitimate politics and illegitimate violence.
